Affiliate Marketing

Introduction

Affiliate marketing has always been one of the most popular methods of making money.

For anyone who is just starting out, there's no easier or faster method of generating income. For anyone who already operates their own online business, selling other people's products can create a substantial boost to the income they're already receiving.

The primary appeal comes from the fact that the only task the affiliate has to perform is to promote whatever product or service they believe has substantial sales potential. The owner of the product or service does everything else.

In theory, you don't even need a website to make money as an affiliate. You can simply promote your assigned affiliate link and then send prospective buyers to the owner's sales page.

Of course, the obvious drawback is that almost every other affiliate will be doing the exact same thing. If all you are doing is directing targeted traffic through your affiliate sales link, you'll be competing on an equal level with countless other people who are promoting the same product.

Affiliate Marketing In's and Out's

The only way to break out of the pack is to market and promote the affiliate product more intelligently and aggressively.

Those who are referred to as “super” affiliates, make a great deal of money selling other people's products. That's because they market and promote them in the same way they would their own products.

Even though there's a sales page associated with each of the affiliate products, they create a page on their own website. The purpose of that
