SO, YOU'RE GETTING MARRIED!

Getting engaged is always extremely exciting, and most couples spend the first few days after the engagement celebrating and letting friends and family members know about the meeting. These early few days are fascinating. However, in no time at all the couple begins to realize the first question friends and family members ask after offering their congratulations is when the wedding will be. This is when the excitement over the engagement begins to wear off, and the couple realizes they need to start planning their wedding in earnest. However, this can be a very daunting task. As the couple begins to think about everything that is involved in the process of planning a wedding, it is straightforward to get overwhelmed. However, this does not have to be the case. This eBook will discuss the process of starting to plan a wedding.

The first step in the process of planning a wedding is not to panic. It is effortless to get caught up thinking there is no way you can handle planning a wedding, but this is not true. Couples have been planning weddings for years, and they are no more organized or more talented than you are. Even if planning events is not your strong suit, I promise you can pull this off. You may need a little more help than some people will need, but you can do this.

The problem most couples have when it comes to planning a wedding is they just don't know where to start. They start thinking about all of
