Introduction

Puppies are adorable. They are so cute and bringing one home is a great joy.

A well-coached puppy will grow into a well-trained dog that will provide you with a sincere relationship which you cannot get anywhere else in the world.

The objective of coaching your puppy is to ensure that he understands the proper manners required to live with humans.

An adult dog's personality is based on the things that were learned as a puppy. This eBook is created to help you begin coaching your new puppy and making him a cherished addition to your family.

Session 1

Family participation in puppy training

Dogs are pack animals. They develop a sense of belonging by building a pack.

As your puppy grows, he will try to find that atmosphere in your house also.

Therefore, it is important that everyone of your family members should participate in the coaching.

Consistency is key when all members are taking part in the puppy's training. You must ensure that everyone is using the same coaching method.

You puppy will not know what is acceptable behaviour if the coaching pattern changes. He will become frustrated and that can lead to negative results.

Controlling your puppy's learning and eliminating bad habits is a great time saver for you and your family.

Ensure that all your family members use the same words that you are using to coach your puppy.

If someone uses a different command when expecting your puppy to "come" for example. Your little student will not know what to do.
