Introduction To Freelance Goldmine

The Internet has opened up opportunities for writers giving them increased access and exposure to clients and projects. The idea of being able to work from home, writing reports, ebooks, guides, tutorials and sales pages is appealing to many, especially when writing was a primary hobby, or something that they have done for many years before the Internet existed.

You can work as much or as little as you like depending on financial and lifestyle goals. There are few costs in setting up a freelance writing business and it is easy to do requiring few resources, other than a internet enabled computer or laptop.

However, writers need to work exceptionally hard, producing new content regularly, sometimes spending hours on end completing projects just to make a decent living. As with lots of things the more you put in the more you will get out.

Daily activities excluding writing include regularly checking emails and responding to clients messages, bidding on projects posted on freelance sites such as Elance as well as updating websites, blogs, records and accounts.

So now that you know what is required of professional freelance writers, let's get into the meat & potatoes of this report, how to start a successful freelance career!
