The Magistrate's Discovery

Welcome, young explorers! Join Sergius Paulus on an exciting adventure as he encounters the truth of God's love and power.

In the ancient city of Paphos, there lived a man named Sergius Paulus. Sergius was the Roman proconsul, which meant he was in charge of governing the city. He was a wise and fair leader who always sought to do what was right.

One day, Sergius heard about two men named Paul and Barnabas who were visiting the city. These men were followers of Jesus and were preaching about the good news of salvation. Intrigued by their message, Sergius sent for them to come and speak with him.

When Paul and Barnabas arrived, Sergius welcomed them into his home and listened intently as they shared the gospel with him. He was amazed by their teachings and the miracles they performed in the name of Jesus.

As Sergius listened, he felt a stirring in his heart. He realized that the message of Jesus was true and powerful. He longed to know more about this God who loved him so deeply.

However, not everyone was happy about Sergius's interest in the gospel. A sorcerer named Elymas, who was also known as Bar-Jesus, tried to oppose Paul and Barnabas. He wanted to keep Sergius from believing in Jesus and turning away from his old ways.
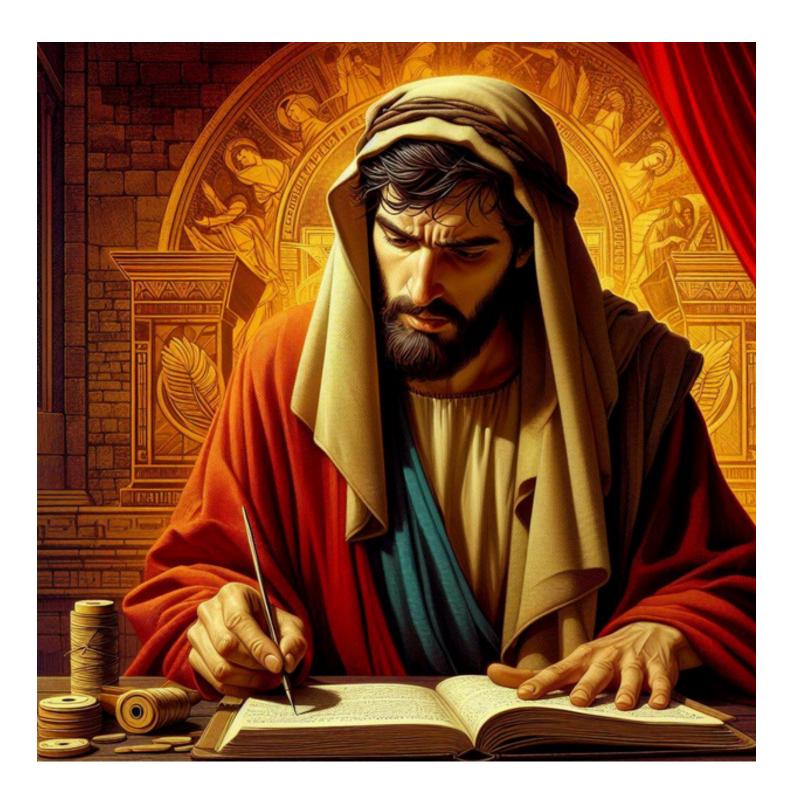

But Paul, filled with the Holy Spirit, confronted Elymas and rebuked him for his deceitful ways. He spoke boldly to Sergius, urging him to believe in Jesus and receive the gift of salvation.

Sergius, moved by Paul's words and the power of God's Spirit, made a decision that would change his life forever. He put his faith in Jesus Christ as his Lord and Savior, embracing the truth of God's love and forgiveness.

From that day on, Sergius Paulus lived as a faithful follower of Jesus. He used his position as proconsul to support the spread of the gospel throughout the region, bringing many others to faith in Christ.

Ending: Through the story of Sergius Paulus, we learn about the power of God's love to transform hearts and lives.
