

How a cat
learned to drive a car

J T White

Once upon a time, in the picturesque town of Pawsville, a cat named Whiskers lived a life full of curiosity and adventure. Nestled between rolling green hills and a sparkling blue creek, Pawsville was a cozy little place that was the perfect playground for an adventurous spirit like Whiskers.

One sunny afternoon, as Whiskers was prowling around the town, his amber eyes spotted a shiny red car parked on the side of the road. The car, gleaming in the sun, instantly aroused his interest. Being the curious cat that he was, Whiskers decided to investigate and climbed into the driver's seat to take a closer look.