

HOW A GROUP OF SHEEP

STAGED A PLAY IN

THE BARNYARD

J T White

In the tranquil, idyllic countryside, nestled between rolling green hills and a vast, sparkling lake, was a delightful small barnyard. This particular barnyard was home to a variety of farm animals, each with their own unique and charming qualities. Among them was an enthusiastic group of sheep, renowned for their love of storytelling and acting. They had a unique knack for it, a talent that was admired and cherished by their fellow barnyard inhabitants. They would frequently huddle together, devising little dramatic skits to perform for the other animals. The corral would echo with laughter and applause each time, much to the delight of the performing sheep.
